What differentiates him is his creative legal mind; he's always pushing the boundaries and is very persistent. He's aggressive but in a very seasoned and elegant way. Steve is up there in the best lawyers I've interacted with in my career.

— CLIENT, CHAMBERS CANADA

As a litigator first and foremost, Steve is an experienced trial and appellate lawyer who brings an unconventional way of thinking to contentious IP matters. He is trusted by clients to resolve complicated patent, copyright, regulatory, and trade secrets disputes and respected for his litigation skills by peers of the IP Bar. Chambers Canada: Canada's Leading Lawyers for Business remarked that Steve "is widely regarded by the market as a 'great courtroom litigator'". Steve and his team won the 2020 Canadian Law Award for "Commercial Litigation Team of the Year" for successfully representing Bell and the National Football League before the Supreme Court of Canada in the historic Administrative Law Trilogy. In addition, he is consistently recognized among the best IP litigation lawyers in Canada by the Canadian Legal Expert Directory.

Supporting in-house counsel at multinational organizations across a range of industries, Steve has acted as lead counsel in many prominent cases, appearing before the Supreme Court of Canada, the Superior and Appellate Courts of British Columbia and Ontario and the Federal Court of Canada. Some of his notable experience includes:
