

Andrew Clark-Alfaro

Summer Student | At University

Toronto

Law School

University of Ottawa

Andrew is completing a combined Bachelor of Commerce and Juris Doctor degree at the University of Ottawa. He currently serves as a Senior Editor with the Ottawa Law Review, as a student caseworker at a community legal clinic, and as a board member of the RÉCLEF – a student organization that represents the interests of French-speaking students at the university.

Last year, Andrew worked as a summer student with the Ottawa Light Rail Transit Commission and as a Research Assistant for the Ottawa Law Review. Before that, he ran a summer tennis coaching business and competed on his university's tennis team. He remains involved in Ottawa's tennis community by serving on the board of the Rockcliffe Lawn Tennis Club.

In his spare time, Andrew likes to play soccer, chess, and the guitar. He also enjoys travelling, investing, and hoping his hometown hockey team wins a Stanley Cup.