Law School

University of British Columbia

Adam is a JD student at the Peter A. Allard School of Law at the University of British Columbia. Prior to attending law school, he received his Bachelor of Humanities and Master of Arts in Religion and Public Life from Carleton University. During his undergraduate degree, Adam spent a year abroad studying in Belgium at KU Leuven's Institute of Philosophy.

At law school, Adam currently serves as Editor-in-Chief (Administrative) of the UBC Law Review. He also volunteered as a workshop facilitator with UBC Legal Education Outreach and as an assistant editor with the Canadian Journal of Family Law. Additionally, Adam worked as a project assistant to collaboratively develop an open-access, critical thinking resource for law students and legal professionals. In 2023, Adam was awarded the Tracey Gibb Memorial Scholarship in Law in recognition of his academic achievement.

In his spare time, Adam enjoys leading birdwatching events, brewing coffee, and reading.
