David Cohen leads our Client Service Delivery team, a national group of professionals that develops creative legal solutions and pricing arrangements to deliver optimal value for clients and help solve their pain points. David and his team are responsible for the firm's initiatives relating to: pricing and legal project management; the development of novel client-focused legal solutions; knowledge integration across all practice groups; and generating actionable insights from the firm's data sets. David is also actively involved in embedding technology, including sophisticated AI tools, into our legal workflows to achieve efficiencies, enhanced work product and new insights for our lawyers and clients.

David frequently speaks and writes about a range of legal innovation topics including the use of alternative fee arrangements, legal project management, and the transformative impact of AI in the legal industry.

David began his legal career practising commercial litigation after clerking at the Federal Court. He subsequently consulted to U.S. and Canadian law firms on talent management, pricing and turnaround strategies.

David obtained his B.A. from the University of Western Ontario and a joint LLB/MBA from Osgoode Hall Law School and the Schulich School of Business. He was called to the Ontario bar in 2005 and is a certified Six Sigma Green Belt.
