Rojin is currently pursuing her BCL/JD at McGill University's Faculty of Law, having previously obtained her Bachelor of Commerce in Economics from McGill's Desautels Faculty of Management.

Throughout her time in law school, Rojin has been actively involved in community service, volunteering at various legal aid clinics such as the Concordia Student Union Legal Information Clinic and Compass Startup Legal Clinic. Her interests in business and comparative law led her to work as a research assistant in comparative banking law.

Rojin's commitment to advocacy is evident through her participation in oral advocacy competitions. Most recently, she represented McGill University at the Davies Corporate/Securities Law Moot, where she was honored with the Third Place Oralist award.

In her pursuit of academic excellence, Rojin shares her knowledge through mentorship, leading tutorials on legal writing for first-year law students. Outside of her legal studies, she enjoys delving into history and philosophy, experimenting with new recipes, and immersing herself in nature.
